10:50 – 11:20h Session 2 - Mediterranean Women Entrepreneurs Challenges

Finance Challenge: Data to Measure Progress

This panel will assess how to get more banks and other financial institution to track and expand their lending to women. Options to more rapidly and systematically scale up the level of financing to women-led SMEs will be discussed, by significantly expanding the number of financial institutions that are tracking, and therefore can receive investments and intentionally grow their lending to WSMEs.

Financial independence is indeed a part of social responsibility. It becomes necessary to inspire women to be investors and close the funding gap. What should be done by governments to promote more bank loans and micro-credits to SMEs, particularly those owned and managed by women? How can angel and venture capital investors expand in innovative ways to create a complete support system for women microfinance and entrepreneurship opportunities?

Partnering to Accelerate Women-Led Businesses Growth

Findings from a recent research on the differences between financing for male and female-led start-ups will be explained in this panel. Despite women lead half the start-ups that participate in accelerators, they continue to face unequal access to capital, with the perceived risk and investor bias being the most likely causes. Participants will have the opportunity to brainstorm on how accelerators and funders can design programmes to help women entrepreneurs access capital and scale up their businesses.

Access to Markets: Value Chain Partnership

This panel will bring together large corporate, financial service providers, development finance institutions and NGOs to explore ways to expand the number of women-led businesses engaged in global value chains. The session will discuss how partnerships can be built to solve multifaceted challenges of getting women into value chains, given that their participation represents only 1%.

Women Leveraging E-Commerce for Growth

The Women Leveraging E-Commerce panel will feature inspiring Mediterranean entrepreneurs at various stages of their e-commerce journey, with a focus on the unique opportunities and challenges they each faced in using e-commerce in the region.

E-Commerce offers entrepreneurs key insights on how they can expand their market reach and grow sales. The session will review the selling requirements for some of the active e-commerce platforms in the region and provide tips on online marketing, order fulfilment, customer care and how to manage their relationships and accounts across different platforms.

Supporting women entrepreneurs increases their income, promotes their confidence, provides them with better access to health and gives them dignity.
